ELASA & EPA IFLA are Partners!

IFLA Emerging Professionals Advocate and ELASA partnership

The IFLA EPA Working Group is pleased to announce our partnership with ELASA !!!

IFLA Emerging Professionals Advocate (IFLA EPA) & the European Landscape Architecture Student Association (ELASA) have joined forces on promoting the landscape architecture profession and supporting emerging professionals and students towards the development of their career.

This step fulfils IFLA EPA's aims to establish an international community of emerging professionals, distribute and disseminate knowledge and information valuable to our members and develop synergies with associations across the world. With ELASA being the major student association across Europe with a wide range of activities such as workshops and summer schools we have kicked off a great collaboration that will enable us to understand the needs of students and graduates and support throughout their career development. With this agreement now signed and sealed discussions are taking place for the preparation of the first collaborative project between the two parties, exploring the interests of emerging professionals in a European and international level. Aiming to reveal new ways of professional development, the project will target innovative practices giving them space to introduce us to their concepts and plans while explaining the route to success for a young landscape architect and designer!

IFLA EPA has a major interest to partnering up with several national or international associations and it would welcome any interest from student or professional associations as well as practices that want to be involved in the scheme or support emerging professionals.

Our working group has also launched two programmes for volunteers. The CONNECT the LandArchs and ACTIVATE the LandArchs are aiming to establish a strong international community and find ways to engage with young and established professionals through a series of fun and also professional activities. We are currently developing the first round of volunteers for both groups and we are pleased to announce that we have representatives from all continents, coming from a broad range background who share an interest on the landscape.

If you are an enthusiastic individual, group, course leader or professional and would like to share your ideas, knowledge and interests with professionals across the world,
